We Are Learning About

Math—Well we survived multiplying larger numbers and we have made it so far with division. I'm very please with how well the students know the division process! We will continue with division for about 2 more weeks.

Language— Science— Our PBL or Project Based Learning project has been a learning experience for not only the students but for me as the teacher. We did back up last week and started over with our powerpoint presentations. After looking around I saw the need for a better rough copy format! So we are back on track! WOW, its hard to think healthy all the time—but we are VERY aware of how we eat, how we move, etc.

Social Studies—Our study of the regions has been an exciting adventure! We are almost done! I know I said that last week!

Homework Corner

Keep up with classroom work.

$2.00 due by Thursday.

Read, Read, Read!

We need HELP!

More on Hy Vee trip!

This is a heart-healthy educational event that will help empower students to take control of eating habits! A registered dietitian will talk to our students about foods that may help increase cardiac wellness.

We will have a healthy snack!

Thank You

Thank you for all the cookies!

I did share with some basketball players.

Thank you everyone for helping with our fund raiser!

Make the World a Better Place!

Stay healthy so you can help change the world.

Dear Parents and Students,

Your child is required to read 4 novels during the third quarter. Each novel should be at least 100 pages in length. The novel should be at your child's reading level. This novel should be at school and read everyday during silent reading time. This novel should be read by your child not too your child. After each novel your child will have an assigned book report to complete by a certain date.

Try to make read as fun and positive as possible. Have your child read orally to you or silent read in a blanket made fort, under the covers with a flashlight, or while sipping hot chocolate on these cold winter days. Be creative when having your child read orally or silently.

4. Mystery Novel -- Components of Literature Report

This novel report is due March 9th.

Happy Reading,

Mrs. Pierson
